She appeared on the show with Ice-T and they were honest about each other. Well, I was so nervous to meet Ice-T, Hargitay admitted. It was OG. He was, like, human. He was a rapper. I was excited about it... He came on the show and was the sweetest, the loveiest, the sweetest. It was a great joy. And for 20 years it's been an education for me. He taught me a lot of things. The two have clearly come a long way since those humble beginnings of friendship. They're great friends now. It's my mother's birthday today. Phyllis Greene is 91. And still smiling. Maybe he's still smiling since last year's birthday. When she turned 90, the whole family came to town. My brother, Tim, turned mata's living room into Ohio State Stadium, and Brutus Buckeye and the OSU cheerleaders joined us in celebrating mom, a lifelong, born and bred fan. This year, Tim and his daughter Hannah flew in to watch Saturday's game with her. Brutus didn't knock on the door, but we've been gathering around mom all weekend. She adamantly (well, as sharply as she gets) insisted that she wanted nothing. No presents. But here's what she may not be focusing on: Her birthday is a gift to us. Today, she and I are going to eat Stouffer's Welsh rarebit on toast and Pepperidge Farm coconut cake. This is our go-to birthday/Thanksgiving/Christmas/evergreen holiday menu. We like it so much that I'd like Norman Rockwell to come back to life to paint our pared down family feast. I took my mom seriously on a no gift thing. I made her xerox out of a record from the FeMail Creations catalogue. It says Good morning... This is God. Today I'm going to solve all your problems... So sit back, relax and leave it all to me. I folded her into a card with a dog on the front that looked like a fat Lausche. Happy birthday, Phyllis Greene. Bless you. D.G.
